

Over the past two or three years I have been visiting a family of wild foxes who live on a cliff overlooking a bay, and during that time I have been granted a privileged close-up view of the way they live. This book covers just over a year of their lives.

I'll tell you a tale of one who's special to me
He lives on the edge of a cliff by the sea

He's a wild fox who is strong and true
I thought I'd share his story with you

He'd had some food and took some away
Back to the den where I thought he might stay

But then reappeared and stood there in view
I looked at him - it was the moment I knew

Then out came his vixen for the very first time
Her eyes wide as saucers with such a shine

I knew there were cubs, but they were hidden away it was just the two of them together that day

He's a dutiful father and husband too
He looks after his family and cares as we do

He is always the same, so kind and polite
Well mannered and thoughtful - never uptight
